APPLICATION

The Counseling Psychology program faculty and the Counseling Psychology and Human Services Department are offering graduate research support to graduate students who are conducting research with ethnic and racial minority communities.

Applications due to Hillary Nadeau in HEDCO Education Building, 2nd floor, by 5:00pm on December 7, 2012.

Purpose: This support is offered to defray costs associated with conducting graduate student collaborative community research projects with ethnic and racial minority individuals. Support offered each year will depend on fund availability.

Award: $300-$1000. This support money must be expended within one year of receipt for costs associated with conducting a graduate research project (e.g., data collection and/or analysis, travel, presentation of results, etc.).

Eligibility: Applicants must be full-time graduate students with good academic standing (B or better grade point average; academic program evaluations satisfactory) in the Counseling Psychology program. Applicants must have applied for other funding support and demonstrate financial need. Financial need may be related to (a) a student’s own financial needs related to the conduct of a research project (e.g., taking time away from paid work to collect data, travel) and/or (b) research-related expenses (e.g., participant compensation). Preference is given to a research project for which there may be fewer alternative funding support opportunities.

Application: Applicants must prepare and submit:

1. A two-page, single-spaced research proposal: (i.e., research question(s), importance of the research, research design and methodology, anticipated outcomes, and plan for dissemination [e.g., list target conferences for presenting and journals for publishing your research findings])
2. A one-page budget: summary of how the funds will be used to support the research.
3. A list of the funding mechanisms for which the applicant has already submitted applications and will submit in the future.
